Last night was the Grand National, a total bust in terms of horse racing. The whole thing was a total mess. Horse racing was already a joke years ago, but it's downhill to now. You can just tell the state of horse racing is in a slump. The madness that drives people to attend racing and gamble on the outcome is just appalling, and as far as gambling goes, the state of horse racing is just a case study on what happens when people gamble too much. It was a farce. They were suppose to be using the public money to build a new paddock. But the public already poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into building the obvious grandstand which is being used next year. It's just money thrown away. As far as the beginning of the weekend goes, there was a horse called I'M A FLYING PELICAN who was pushed off the track going around the first turn and I remember thinking that was really bad timing. Did they not think it was going to rain? I mean, can you imagine what the fuck would be going through the man's mind who pushed that horse off? If it were me, I'd be so fucking furious. But I could see the crowd getting pissed off and thinking 'the fuck you just did?'. The first race was a waste of time. It was the three-year-old hurdle race, and a horse was dead and a horse was getting the boot, and it took forever for us to get past the first horse who went out. Then, the first of three runnings of the Grand National. Every time it would go off, we all would shout 'you've got one, you've got one!' and then, it would go off on the third of the three heats. I did enjoy the race because I knew it was going to be a great race. The third horse of the day went out, and it went into a corner a bit wide, and the crowd started booing and the horse limped home. It was considered a win, but I don't see any sense in racing when your public is paying to attend. The most disappointing thing is, I really like watching the Grand National. I really enjoy reading about it and the horses which are entered, and I do think that
